Report 1: The first report provides an effective and well-written rationale for the study under consideration. The section culminates by posing research question that is interesting and specific. This report establishes the framework of analysis and explains the topic under study. It should satisfy the University formatting requirements and University guidelines for References.	15
Report 2: The second report consists of three sections: introduction, literature review, and problem modelling. Literature review should fit the research question and support the analysis to be conducted in the analytical section AND make some interesting and perhaps novel connections. References should be relevant and comprehensive and from reliable sources (peer-reviewed journals, books, government publications, reputable news sources). Overall, the paper should be well organized, ideas should be developed sequentially and logically, and transitions (including headings) should help the reader along. There should be no grammatical or spelling mistakes.	15

Oral presentation: The presentation should be well organized, and engage introduction, body, and conclusion. Background and importance of research should be well identified. Essential information should be given to allow the audience to effectively evaluate the topic.	20
Poster presentation: The poster attracts viewer's attention, words are easy to read, and graphics/tables are presented to enhance presentation. The poster should clearly state the research question and conclusions. The presenters' response to questions should demonstrate knowledge of subject matter and project.	20
